INTRODUCTION.

THIS volume contains the proceedings of the Courts Leet of the Manor of Manchester, from the 9th April, 1806, to the 21st April, 1820. The entries in each Court are similar in character to those of the last two volumes (vols. viii. and ix.), and do not call for much special comment. The following offences are those which came the most frequently before the Court:—Using defective weights and measures, offering bad meat for sale, obstructing streets and passages, not repairing streets, &c.; not fencing off land, canals, &c.; not covering "cellar holes," allowing dangerous and other nuisances, permitting "cotton factories" to be in a dirty condition, emitting large quantities of smoke from chimnies, not keeping pigsties, &c., clean, encroaching on the waste land in the town, the appointed officers not doing their duty, as well as the non-attendance of the burgesses and the refusal of those persons properly qualified to take office. These offences were punished by money fines, varying greatly in amount, and in many instances not enforced, if the offence was not persisted in, or if it was set right. Reference was made in the last volume to an instance of heavy fines being inflicted on those who refused to undertake the office of Constable, and in this volume a similar case may be noted. At the Court held on the 3rd October, 1818, John Drinkwater, Esq., and Peter Ewart, Esq., were appointed Constables. At the adjourned meeting, held on the 21st October, they both refused to act, and the former was fined £20 and the latter £100. The Jury then appointed Mr. James Potter and Mr. John Touchet, but the former refused to serve, and was fined £100. Finally, Mr. John Touchet and Mr. John Lomax accepted the office, and duly took the necessary oaths. (See pp. 47, 53, and 54.) A note at the end of the proceedings of this Court, signed by Mr. Samuel Kay, the Deputy Steward, states that these three fines were duly paid "for the use of Sir Oswald Mosley, Baronet, Lord of the Manor aforesaid." In this respect they differed from those referred to in the last volume, for Sir Oswald Mosley brought an action against Mr. John Stonehouse and Mr. John Railton, the two Constables who then refused to act as Constables (1st October, 1804, see vol. ix., p. 215), which was tried in the Court of King's Bench on the 11th February, 1806. They claimed exemption as being the holders of what were then known as "Tyburn tickets," by which those who had obtained the conviction of any person, charged with committing a capital offence, were freed from serving any public offices. They succeeded in establishing their claim to exemption, and the lord of the manor lost his case as well as the fines of £20 each, which they had been called upon to pay.

The duties of the various officers elected at each Michaelmas Court were fully set out in the Introduction to the last volume, and it only remains to note that at the Court held on the 26th October, 1814, mention is there made for the first time of the Court being held "in the manor Court House." This place is thus described in Corry's History of Lancashire, vol. ij., p. 477, published in 1825, which also supplies some information of interest:—

> "The Manor Court Room is a spacious apartment at the end of High-street, well calculated for the purpose of holding the Courts Leet and Courts Baron in. The Courts Leet are held twice a year, within a month of Easter and a month of Michaelmas, at the latter of which the Boroughreeve, Constables, and other Town's Officers, are annually chosen by a Jury, who are impaneled by the Steward of the Court, under the direction of the Lord of the Manor. The Courts Baron are held every three weeks for the recovery of debts under forty shillings. The Court of Requests also make use of this room, and the Sheriff's Court sits here by adjournment every month."

Attention has been directed in the Introductions to the last two volumes to the growing importance of the office of Deputy Constable and to the appointment to that office of Mr. Joseph Nadin, whose salary in 1805 was raised to the sum of £200 a year. At the Court held on the 19th October, 1807, this was increased to £300 a year, and at that held on the 22nd October, 1810, it was raised to £350 a year, which he was receiving when this volume closes. The three Beadles appointed at each Michaelmas Court received £25 a year each, and in 1811 their number was raised to four, each receiving the above sum.

Mr. Joseph Aston, in his Picture of Manchester, published in 1816, thus describes the government of the town and the high position held by the Boroughreeve :—

> "Notwithstanding the magnitude and population of Manchester it is governed by a Headborough (called the Boroughreeve) and two Constables, chosen annually from the most respectable of the inhabitants by a jury impaneled by the Steward of the Manor, at the latter of the Courts Leet, which are held by the Lord of the Manor, every year at Easter and Michaelmas. It has long been a rule in the choice of the Boroughreeves, to select those gentlemen, who have already served the office of Constable; and in no corporation is the Mayor, for the time being, treated with more respect, (the paraphanalia of a mace-bearer excepted) than the Boroughreeve of Manchester. He does not appear to have many duties to discharge, since the actual superintendence of the police is performed, under the direction of the two Constables, by their deputy, who has a salary of £350 per annum, and has under his command four beadles to assist him in the laborious duty of constable in so populous a township. The chief duty of the Boroughreeve is to preside at all public meetings, which are convened by himself and the Constables, at the requisition of respectable inhabitants, who notify the nature of the business intended to be brought forward. He is also the distributor of certain charities, which are denominated "The Boroughreeve's Charities." In aid of the Constables chosen by the Jury, nearly two hundred Special Constables are annually sworn, who, residing in different quarters of the town, tend very much to the conservation of the peace."

SIR OSWALD MOSLEY, BART., was the lord of the manor of Manchester during the whole of the time included in this volume, and was represented by John Cross, Esq., barrister at law, the Steward, from 1806 to 1819, when James Norris, Esq., barrister at law, was appointed to that office, which he was still holding when this volume closes.

The proceedings of each Court have been carefully compared with the original so as to ensure an exact reproduction in print, but the routine character of the proceedings has rendered it impossible to add many notes.
